RICHMOND DEMOCRAT.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY EVENING.

THOS. D. BOGIE,

EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
OFFICE—South-West Corner of the Public Square, in Woodson & Bro. Building.

Col. T. T. Crittenden is author. It is announced by the Sedalia Democrat, as a candidate for Governor.

Henry Clay Dean refused to fill his appointment at the Sweet Springs fair last week. He said he could not speak against horse racing and wheels of fortune.

Missouri has eight million three hundred and twenty-one thousand three hundred and ninety-nine dollars' worth of school houses and sites, and pays annually to teachers $2,329,430, 20.

Wendell Phillips, long a stalwart Republican, speaking of Secretary Sherman, says: "There is no doctrine in finance that he has not advocated, and none that he has not denied; no principle on either side that he has not asserted, none that he has not scouted."

It is strange how little an oath can be relied upon at this period of the world's history. An evidence of it is in a certain affidavit made by a man named Harris, charging fraud in the Cincinnati election of last fall. When put on the stand before the Congressional Investigating Committee, he denied more than half of the statement to which his name was signed in the most solemn manner.

The Appleton City Leader says a man is dying in that vicinity who says he is the man who killed Miller, and that it was not Daniels, who was hanged at Warrenton for that crime. When it is remembered that Daniels told his mother only a few hours before his death that he was innocent of the crime, and that he protested his innocence up to the last moment of his life, the statement of the dying man will be accepted by some people as true.

Kurel World: The taxing of a farmer's lands, and of his crops, too, is an outrage. What would merchants say if they were not only taxed for the amount of goods they had on hand at any one time, and then, in addition, upon all the sales they had made during the entire year on all the goods they had handled? And yet one is just as reasonable as the other. The law must be changed. The farmers are taxed already more than any other class, without taxing the crops they may yearly produce.

The La Plata Home Press says: "It is a noteworthy fact that in the rural districts in this county many of the best citizens, men who mould and lead public opinion in their neighborhood, are taking an active interest in the temperance cause, indicating most conclusively that those silent yet effective forces of society are undergoing a revolution that will make them potent for good in the future. This is a subject for gratulation by every good citizen, and we point to it as an important factor in inducing immigration to our county of the best class of people."

Paris Mercury: At the annual picnic of the Grangers of St. Louis county, the other day, Hon. John Walker, of Howard county, who is prominently spoken of for Governor, made the first speech. In the course of his remarks he said he considered the currency of the country good enough, but thought there ought to be a little more of it; but it was a question of such vital importance he could not pretend to indicate the place to begin or stop at, but was of the opinion that by inserting a plank in the platform of one of the two great parties the desired object could be obtained without having recourse to a third or Greenback party, for which he had great respect.

The Maine Republicans declare that they will carry the coming election at any cost. It is to be hoped that the entire cost will not be assessed against the demoralized clerks at Washington.

Richmond.

Elder G. A. Hoffman, who visited this place a few weeks since writes the following to the Paris Mercury: "We arrived in Richmond at 8 o'clock this morning. It has not yet entirely recovered from the cyclone of last year, yet a large number of the buildings have been repaired or rebuilt. In population it is somewhat larger than Paris, yet the 'Boss Town' is far ahead in churches, there being two in Richmond, the Christian and a Methodist. Two churches were destroyed by the cyclone and have not been rebuilt. Richmond is not so compactly built as Paris, and the ground upon which it stands is much more rolling, yet the soil seems to indicate its fertility by a heavy growth of all kinds of vegetation."

After preaching Lord's Day morning and night, at Richmond, Monday, the 18th, found us comfortably seated on the Lexington & St. Joe train bound for Council Bluffs. The country between Richmond and St. Joe is, perhaps the most beautiful I ever beheld. It seems, to a great extent, to satisfy the fancies and longings of my eyes. It is a beautiful rolling prairie, the fertility is, perhaps, equal to our best prairies in old Missouri. It is 'much more rolling than our prairies, and its beauty seems to consist in this. To one side the pasture green and fresh with its herds of sheep and fine delights the eye. To the other, the cornfield, to whom Sol has already given the golden tinge. Its overabundant stalks remind us that an abundant harvest awaits the tiller of the soil. Just beyond the grainfield and meadow are still growing with their stalks of wheat and hay. And above the villa of the farmer with its fruit and shade trees, its stables and barns, just to the right, between two such farms, there lies a vale through which, perhaps, we'll catch a passing glimpse of a village. Thus it continues for miles, all under fence and in a fine state of cultivation.

How "Protection" Works.

People who take pleasure in the present protective tariff, which is transferring the earnings of the multitude to the pockets of the few protected, will read with interest Sam Cox's off-hand way of stating the process of "protection." He said: "The farmer, starting for his work has a shoe put on his horse with nails taxed 67 per cent., driven with a hammer taxed 54 per cent., cuts a stick with a knife taxed 50 per cent., he hitches his horse to a plow taxed 50 per cent., with chains taxed 67 per cent. He returns to his home at night, lays his weary limbs on a sheet taxed 58 per cent., and covers himself with a blanket which has paid a tax of 250 per cent. He rises in the morning, puts on an humble flannel shirt taxed 80 per cent., his coat taxed 50 per cent., shoes taxed 35 per cent., and hat taxed 70 per cent., opens family worship with a Bible taxed 35 per cent., and kneels to his God on a carpet taxed 250 per cent., sits down to his humble meal from a plate taxed 40 per cent., with a knife and fork taxed 35 per cent., seasons his food with salt taxed 130 per cent., pepper 297 per cent., drinks his coffee with sugar taxed 70 per cent., he looks around on his wife and children all taxed in the same way, takes a chew of tobacco taxed 100 per cent., and leans back in his chair and thanks his stars that he lives in the freest and best Government under Heaven."

Nearly $12,000,000 has already been disbursed by the arrears of the pension act, leaving $13,000,000 to be paid. No special order is observed in the payment of the arrears, the cases being settled in the order in which they are reached. They will aggregate, as the commissioner estimated, about 45,000 claims, requiring $25,000,000 to pay them. The largest amount paid to any pensioner was $4,500, and in some instances a certificate has been issued for $1,000. The daily disbursement averages $250,000. Claims are being paid at the rate of 500 a day, and the officials expect to be able to dispose of all of them before the middle of October.—K. C. Times.

Centralization Doctrine.

A political letter written to Senator Hill, of Georgia, by William Giles Dix, Esq., of Peabody, Mass., says: "The main duty of the Republican party when the war was over was, by constitutional and historical precedent, to destroy the constitution of the United States, whose deadly and logical work the civil war was. It should have been put out of the way of doing any more mischief, just as the articles of confederation were put out of the way when their work, both for good and evil, had been done. I shall rejoice indeed if there be a good reason to believe that the Republican party is determined to do what it can to secure a national government, in which the States shall be thoroughly subordinate to the national sovereignty, as much so, certainly, as the cities and towns of any State are to any State government and probably much more so."

Every person connected with the civil administration of the State should be a national officer, from the Governor of a State to the humblest police officer. It may be well enough that the Governors of the States should be chosen as they now are, by the people of the States—but the Governors, once designated by the popular vote, should receive their authority and commission from the National Government. So the Mayors of cities and superintendents of towns may be chosen by the cities and towns; but their commissioners should come from the Governor of the State himself, under the supposition that he is a representative of the national government.

You see, honorable sir, that I advocate a system of national government which shall greatly modify the executive authority of the States, and completely abolish State courts, State judges, State laws, State militias and State constitutions. This letter of William Giles Dix, a prominent Republican of Massachusetts, is but the echo of the sentiments of Secretary Sherman and other leaders and exponents of Republican principles, though up to the present time they have carefully refrained from giving their public expression. That is the tendency of the party, and their intention to dissolve state lines and create a centralized power cannot be disputed. They desire the state officials to be "national officers, from the Governor of a state down to the humblest police officer." Wipe out state lines, create a government of aristocracy, a centralized power, and then we can run things to suit ourselves and keep each other in office continually. How do you like the outlook as laid down by Republican leaders? Does it encourage you to vote the Republican ticket?

Maxims for a Young Man.

Never be idle. If your hands cannot be usefully employed, attend to the cultivation of your mind. Always speak the truth. Keep good company or none. Live up to your engagements. Keep your own secrets, if you have any. When you speak to a person look him in the face. Good company and good conversation are the very sinews of virtue. Good character is above all things else. Never listen to loose or idle conversation. You had better be poisoned in your blood than in your principles. Your character cannot be essentially injured except by your own acts. If one speaks evil of you, be so virtuous that men won't believe him. Drink no intoxicating liquors. Ever live, misfortunes excepted, within your income. When you retire to bed, think over what you have done during the day. Never speak lightly of religion. Make no haste to be rich, if you would prosper. Small and steady gains give competency with tranquility of mind. Never play at any kind of chance games. Avoid temptation through fear you may not withstand it. Earn your money before you spend it. Never run in debt unless you can see a way to get out again. Never borrow if you possibly avoid it. Keep yourself innocent if you won't be happy. Save when you are young to spend when you are old. Never think that which you do for religion is time or mispent.

Niggardly Husbands.

A few days ago a little incident fell under our notice that would furnish material for a long article had we time and space for moralizing and lecturing husbands upon an abominable, tyrannical and unjust habit that ninety-nine out of every hundred have. In one of the stores on Front street, where we stopped to see the proprietor on business, a man and woman were making some purchases. The man, pinched look upon the woman's face told as plainly as words that her married life had been one of work, work, work. She was poorly dressed in comparison with her rugged husband. He had purchased boots, clothing, etc., for himself, but we noticed that the woman had not gotten a single article for her own use. She asked to see some stockings, which were shown her, but when told the price she looked timidly at her husband and asked to see cheaper in the store. Finally she selected a pair, and plucking her lord and master to one side we inadvertently overheard her ask him to let her have ten cents—the price of the stockings—explaining that she had spent all her money some weeks before for the children. Ten cents was doled out to her from a well-filled pocket book, the filling of which no doubt was due as much to her work as to his, and it should have been partnership property. How can men be so niggardly and selfish? Have they forgotten how hard it was when they were in their teens to ask the "old man" for a few cents? How miserably they felt although they have worked hard and helped earned what was there laid by? This habit of making wives dependent upon their husbands for every cent they find it necessary to expend is one that every right minded man should be ashamed of. Let the husband reverse the order of things for awhile and see how he would enjoy the position his thoughtlessness or niggardness forces his wife to occupy. Why not leave money from time to time to use it as she sees fit? Are you afraid she will be extravagant? No, you know she will make one dollar go as far in supplying her wants as you will make five dollars go in supplying your wants. No danger of her spending a half dollar or more treating herself and several comrades—no danger of her buying a pocketful of cigars—no danger of her betting anything on a dog-fight or a horse—no danger of her throwing the money away in the thousand and one ways that men do. Suppose she does buy a bit of ribbon, a dress, a bonnet; does she have the right to spend what she helps to earn? Don't you want your wife to look respectable? "It's all I can do to make both ends meet." Oh, yes; that is as old as the hills; it ought to ease your conscience. You don't think of it when you throw your money away for things you could easily do without. You never, no, never.

Confound you, quit your niggardly ways—give your wife money without waiting for her to ask for it—you know you are guilty of a mean trick when you place her in the position of a slave. We can't waste no more time on you, but we've said enough to shame a cast iron man. Are you guilty?

Among the many wise and wholesome laws enacted by our last Legislature is one which provides for the cancellation of county warrants by the treasurer by punching round holes through the signatures and writing across the face of the warrant in red ink the word "cancelled," with the date of such cancellation, and that the county clerk shall also write "cancelled" across the back of the warrant, in red ink, when the court receives it from the treasurer as a voucher in his settlement. The design of this law is so apparent that it needs no explanation. It was claimed that it was badly needed in some parts of the State. It is certainly a reasonable precaution. The bill also provides that the warrants after their cancellation shall be filed as records of the court.

"It is a settled principle, your honor," said an eminent lawyer, "that causes always produce effects." "They always do for lawyers," responded the judge; "but I have sometimes known a cause to deprive a client of all his effects."

SELECT POETRY.

HOME.
Home will be just what we make it.
Clothed in sorrow or in joy;
Love, if pure—no power can break it.
Nor its peaceful life annoy.
Darkness always gathers strongest
Where love's power is little known;
There its shadow dwells the long day,
As a tyrant on his throne.
In the garret or the palace,
Home is home, where'er it be,
Love should rule it free from malice,
Spreading peace and harmony.
Pleasant words at home returning,
Bring kind answers back again;
Each from each be ever bearing—
Love is its bright golden chain.
Oh how grand, arrayed in beauty,
When love's power guides all at home;
As a sentinel on duty.
It repulses—what'er may come.
Loving hearts are ever ready
To add pleasures every day;
By their life power, firm and steady,
Blessing all within their way.
May love's sun be ever shining,
In each home o'er all the land.
By its mystic heart entwining,
Heart to heart and hand to hand.
Flowing onward as a river,
In its silent majesty;
God's true presence to deliver
Hearts and homes from misery.

Some Little Things.

If your coal fire is low, throw on a tablespoonful of salt, and it will help it very much.
A little ginger put into sausage meat improves the flavor.
In icing cakes, dip the knife frequently into cold water.
In boiling meat for soup, use cold water to extract the juices.
If the meat is wanted for itself alone, plunge in boiling water at once.
You can get a bottle or barrel of oil off any carpet or wooden stuff by applying buckwheat plentifully and faithfully. Never put water to such a grease spot, or liquid of any kind.
Broil steak without salting. Salt draws the juices in cooking; it is desirable to keep these in if possible. Cook over a hot fire, turning frequently, searing on both sides. Place on a platter; salt and pepper to taste.
Beef having a tendency to be tough can be made very palatable by steaming gently for two hours with pepper and salt, taking out about a pint of the liquor when half done, and letting the rest boil into the meat. Brown the meat in the pot. After taking up, make a gravy of the pint of liquor saved.
A small piece of charcoal in the pot with boiling cabbage removes the smell.
Clean oil cloth with milk and water; a brush and soap will ruin them.
Tumblers that have had milk in them should never be put in hot water.
A spoonful of stewed tomatoes in the gravy of either roasted or fried meat is an improvement.
The skin of a boiled egg is the most efficacious remedy that can be applied to a boil. Peel it carefully, wet and apply it to the part affected. It will draw off the matter and relieve the soreness in a few hours.
A farmer says: "Four years ago my farm was fearfully infested with rats. They were so numerous that I had great fears of my whole crop being destroyed by them after it was housed; but having two acres of wild pepper mint that grew in a field of wheat, cut and with the wheat, drove the rats from my premises. I have not been troubled with them since, while my neighbors have any quantity of them. I feel convinced that any person who is troubled with these pests could easily get rid of them by gathering a good supply of mint and placing it around the walls or base of their barns."

Milan, Mo., has a white ribbon temperance club, conducted wholly by ladies. At their meetings they have a journal, essays and dialogues, and make them very entertaining.

There's a fortune for the man who invents a pencil that will always stay sharpened.

Soft Yeast—Pare and grate six large potatoes; boil a large handful of hops in two quarts of water; strain and pour on the potatoes while boiling hot; add one teaspoonful of brown sugar when sufficiently cool.
